

DAILY MORNING LEADER
PUBLISHED DAILY, THURSDAY & WEEKLY, BY
E. COWLES & CO.
At Superior street.

TERMS OF DAILY AND THURSDAY:
Daily, per copy, 15¢; per week, 100¢.
Two weeks' or one month's subscription, $1.00.
For less than one year, 50 Cents per month.

Terms of Weekly Leader.
The Premiums have increased, so that a reduction in the price of the LEADER would be beneficial to the subscriber. We therefore propose to reduce the subscription price of the WEEKLY LEADER, to stimulate its circulation. It will now cost only ONE DOLLAR for six months. This will also reduce the cost of advertising to clubs, societies, &c., &c. Every club or society that advertises in the LEADER will receive a discount of 10% off their bill.

Advertisers will be charged 10% less for each insertion.

Five cents extra will be charged on such paper, in clubs, where the name of the subscriber is given, and 10¢ extra allowed to those who give us the club or their name.

Invariably in Advance.

Persons advertising ought to subscribe, without exception, except to themselves and associates.

All's & Counsellors.

WILLIAM K. SHERWIN, Attorney and Counsellor-at-Law, No. 1 Post Office Building, Public Square, Cleveland, O. W. K. SHERWIN.

ELI BRUCE, ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR-AT-LAW, A. W. Parsons Agent, Notary Public, Office No. 10 Superior Street, Atwater Building, Cleveland, O. E. BRUCE.

BOARDMAN & INGERSOLL ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Atwater Bldg, foot of 2d Street, Cleveland, O. B. & I. BOARDMAN.

VAN BUREN & CHAMBERLAIN, ATTORNEYS & SOLICITORS, No. 12 Superior Street, Cleveland, O. V. B. & C. CHAMBERLAIN.

BROOKS & FORD, ATTORNEYS, Atwater Buildings, foot of Superior St., Cleveland, O. B. & F. BROOKS.

WILLIAMSON & RIDDLE, ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Office No. 10 Superior Street, Cleveland, O. W. & G. RIDDLE.

PALMER & AUSTIN, ATTORNEYS AT LAW, Old Commercial Block, P. & A. PALMER.

A SPER J.V. ATTORNEY AT LAW, Warren, Trumbull County, Ohio. A. SPER.

Dentistry.

AT 211 SUPERIOR ST.

IF YOUR TEETH ARE GOOD, THEY WILL LAST LONGER. If they are bad, we can make them good. If you have no teeth at all, we can put them in. If the teeth in the mouth, by the human parent, and the profound ignorance that hundreds of persons have good sets of teeth for the want of the services of a dental surgeon. A poor infant operator is in every way inferior to a good dentist, and keeps them in order.

The Helper books were burned, and as the term of court drew near, Daniel Worth was removed from Greenbush to the Randolph County jail, in this town, in confinement in the vice room, very great. The officers of the court urged him to bring along the trial with all possible speed. The counsel for the defense declared that he was left no peace, during the earlier stages, so constant and impulsive were the inquiries.

The trial took place on Friday of last week. The court-room was closely filled with crowds of spectators. Mr. Worth appeared soon after 10 o'clock. He is a man of imposing and dignified presence. He is about fifty-five years old, and yet his frame is full of vigor and the movements of his bearing are unfeignedly manly. His great height, six feet and four inches, adds vastly to the impressiveness of his mien. His manner was perfectly calm, and his countenance was quite untroubled.

A good deal of time—upward of two hours—was occupied in impeaching a jury. Of about fifty who were examined, almost all had formed and expressed opinions on the guilt of the accused—opinions very slightly varying, if at all. Of those who were examined, at least selected, four were slaveholders and one was a slaveholder. The indictment, which was very long, covering twenty pages, was largely occupied with citations from Helper's book, and as such could have been regarded as an incendiary document of very dangerous character. Mr. Scott, one of the prosecuting attorneys, succeeded while reading it to move the crowd of spectators to move out of the courtroom, and to demand the removal of the prisoner.

In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he had hidden his in a hollow log in the woods. Another named Slader, admitted he had done the same. In his opening address, he invoked the usual rhetorical resources on such occasions, launching liberal supplies of vehemence denunciation, and revelling in the wildest extravagance of oratory. Deluges of blood, massacred bodies generally, but particularly of wives and children, badly cut throats and burning buildings were wrought together into a picture of very gory hue. Mr. Scott did it all well, and having told of the Government's case, told all his witnesses, eight in number. The trial, however, was quickly accomplished.

Four copies of "The Impending Crisis" were produced, which it was proved, Mr. Worth had sold to different parties, who appeared.

One of these testified that, on leasing of Worth's arrest, he had buried his copy somewhere, whence it had been exhumed for use on the trial. Another declared he